THE HOME OF THE ROSECRANS FAMILY

HOMER, LICKING COUNTY, OHIO

Pictured above is what is traditionally named as the home of Mr. and Mrs. Crandall Rosecrans and family. It was the birthplace of Sylvester Horton Rosecrans, the first Bishop of the Diocese of Columbus. The house is situated in the little village of Homer which is on State Route 661 just south of the Knox County line. The house is located on Lot 12, one of the four lots bought by Mr. Rosecrans. It was built in 1825. Sylvester was born in 1827. Later the family lived on a farm just a short distance south of the village on the east side of State Route 661.

THE ROSECRANS FAMILY AT HOMER,
LICKING COUNTY, OHIO

Bishop Rosecrans of Columbus was the grandson of Dr. Daniel Rosecrans who, with his family, was among a group of farmers moving in 1808 from the Wyoming Valley in northeastern Pennsylvania to Delaware county, Ohio. Dr. Rosecrans was the son of Capt. Daniel Rosecrans, a Revolutionary soldier (1).

Making the trip to Ohio with Dr. Rosecrans were his wife, Thankful Wilcox, and six children. Four more were to be born in Ohio. Mr. Rosecrans purchased land along the Little Walnut Creek in Kingston township, Delaware county.

Thankful Wilcox (Mrs. Daniel Rosecrans) was the sister of Crandall Wilcox, an early settler in the area now known as Homer in the northwest part of Licking county, Ohio. The little settlement was first known as Burlington, named after the home town in Vermont of Col. Wait Wright, one of its early residents. When the township was organized in 1817 it was named Burlington township. In 1831, when it was possible to have a post office, the name was changed to Homer, since there was already a Burlington post office in Ohio.

Bishop Rosecrans' father was Crandall Rosecrans, the eldest son of Daniel Rosecrans and Thankful Wilcox. He was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 30, 1794, and was fourteen years of age when the family moved to Ohio. In 1816 Crandall married Jemima Hopkins, daughter of Timothy Hopkins, a relative of Governor Stephen Hopkins of Rhode Island, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

In 1817, Chauncey, the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Crandall Rosecrans, was born. He died in infancy. Their next child, William Starke, was born Sept. 6, 1819. He was baptized in the Church of England religion. He received the name "Starke" in compliment to General John Stark, one of his father's heroes.

While William was still a baby. Crandall moved his little family to Burlington in Licking county, where his uncle Crandall Wilcox had settled in 1818. Three more Rosecrans boys were born in Burlington. They were Charles Wesley, born in 1822; Henry Crandall, born in 1824, and Sylvester Horton, born Feb. 5, 1827.

In Burlington Mr. Rosecrans bought Lots 9, 10, 11 and 12, on the north-east corner of Main and Water streets, the only intersection in the town (2). On Lot 12 he built his first home in 1825. It was under construction during the famous "Burlington storm" of that year (3).

After arrival in Burlington Mr. Rosecrans opened a tavern and store, acquired additional houses and lots, a garden and a potash factory. At one time he commanded the militia of the area. From time to time he was engaged in the construction of public works.

He also acquired a farm a short distance south of the village and on the east side of the present State Route 661. The farm home has not survived the years, but a picture of it is available.

Neighbors remembered the four Rosecrans boys as "lively and mettlesome." William, the eldest, and Sylvester, the youngest, were known as studios. They were probably already of school age when the family lived in the farm home.

There is some question as to whether or not William and Sylvester, if not Charles and Henry, attended Martinsburg Academy, located where the present town of that name is found in southeastern Knox county, Ohio, about ten miles east of Homer.

The Academy, which enjoyed a good reputation, was started in 1838, and continued until 1860. Records of the school are lost, but there is an 1841 catalog at the Ohio Historical Society library in Columbus. The catalog lists as departments of instruction English, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Mathematics, Natural Sciences, and Intellectual and Moral Science. The titles of the various classes taught in each department are impressive. Tuition was $10.00 for five months. Students were required to attend one of the churches in the village on Sundays, and "strict attention was paid to their moral character."

According to the academy's 1841 catalog there were 46 young men in attendance. Young Sylvester Rosecrans, who would have been 14 years of age, was not among them.

Where the Rosecrans boys received their early education seems not to have been recorded. William, the oldest, was quite capable and did a lot of self education. He also received some tutoring. He decided to enter West Point Military academy and was accepted in 1838. To prepare for the entrance examination, he spent less than three months at Kenyon college, Gambier, Ohio, to brush up on his education. Where Charles and Henry went to school is not known.

Sylvester wrote (4) to his brother, William, who was at West Point, that he had visited Kenyon college. This was in October, 1842. The following year he entered Kenyon as a freshman. He spent three years there and his scholastic record was almost perfect.

Further information of the Rosecrans family life in Homer is found in letters Sylvester wrote to his brother, William. He was at home in April, 1846, and wrote (5) as follows: "Here from the window I can look out upon our sheep and colts gathered together and basking in the sun down by the woods. Father and I have been making a garden last week. We have perpetrated a gravel walk from the front door to the road....An old ill-looking fence surrounds the house....Uncle George's boys and girls are becoming blooming dames and bearded men....Mother is well and blessed with excellent health. The boys, I guess, are determined to pay for the farm and their project for doing so, by the tobacco business, is very good."

In July of the same year he wrote from Homer that his father had gone to Illinois to buy cattle which he expected to drive east in the fall. The tobacco crop had failed because of dry weather, but the wheat was very good.

In April, 1847, Sylvester was finishing his college studies at St. John's college (Fordham), New York. He seemed to have been longing for home when he wrote (6): "It must be delightful spring at home now. I imagine the fields are plowed, the logsheaps are smoking, the lettuce in the garden is just coming up, the orchard in bloom, and the grass all green in the meadows, and think home a delightful place."

St. Aloysius Seminary

An additional note: In a letter of Nov. 10, 1876, Bishop Rosecrans wrote to his brother, General William S. Rosecrans, that "I have been obliged to close the Seminary and take the few theologians to live at the Cathedral and St. Patrick's.....I have a dwelling built now on the Cathedral lot and the Cathedral clergy and seminarians live there. My room is there but as yet I continue to occupy my rooms in the convent where I have lived a year" (General Rosecrans Collection, UCLA).

In last month's "Bulletin" it was incorrectly stated that Father Cush, listed among those at the seminary, was ordained Dec. 22, 188. He was ordained by Bishop Watterson, May 26, 1888.
